Purpose of Fordham University School of Law

It is the aim of the school to make its students efficient lawyers and qualify them for the conduct of public affairs, for the proper administration of which a knowledge of the law is essential. Therefore, the historical and philosophical development, as well as the practical application of the subjects in the courses, will be taught. A very comprehensive course of lectures on Jurisprudence will be delivered.

The design of the School is to afford a practical and scientific education in the principles of General Jurisprudence.

The Common and Statute Law of the United States.

The System of Equity Jurisprudence.

The Civil and Roman Law.

Pleading and Civil Procedure at Common Law and under the New York Code.

Practice in the New York Courts.

PERIOD OF STUDY.

The Course for the degree of Bachelor of Laws will cover three years; the Fourth Year's Course is required for the degree of Master of Laws.

The Fourth Year's Course will be given in the year 1910-1911, provided a sufficient number of students apply for graduate instruction. Those desirous of entering this course are requested to communicate with the Registrar of the School.

SYSTEM OF INSTRUCTION.

The case system will be followed.

A certain number of cases will be assigned each day for study.

The instructor will go over the matter embraced in the cases, discussing with the students the points and principles involved.

Students will thus have the fullest opportunity for familiarizing themselves with each topic treated in the course; first, by a careful study of the leading cases, and then by discussion with the instructor.

The object of the system of instruction is to teach the student to deduce legal principles from reported cases, and thus to develop in him the power of legal reasoning through the use of the actual decisions of the courts. By this method the student learns from the very beginning to do the kind of work which every lawyer must do in actual practice.

Although the aim of the school is to train its students so that they may be qualified to practice law in any common law jurisdiction, especial care is taken throughout the course to indicate in each subject the peculiarities of the law of New York. Particular attention is called to the following courses which have a special bearing on the New York law:

1. COMMON LAW AND CODE PLEADING.—In this course the principles of common law and code pleading are taught, and the chief similarities and differences between the common law pleading and the code pleading (which is in force in New York) are fully explained.

2. THE NEW YORK CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.—The object of this course is a careful study of the more important sections of the New York Code and their application to such cases as might arise in actual practice.

3. PRACTICE IN THE NEW YORK COURTS.—The purpose of this course is to train the students in the drawing of pleadings and other legal papers, in the trial of cases, in other details of court work, and in the routine matters of office practice.

The following courses are of importance in relation to the ethical meaning of the law, and the proper conduct of the lawyer in professional life.

1. JURISPRUDENCE.—This course is given by Rev. T. J. Shealy, S.J., and deals with the fundamental ethical concepts, the general principles that form the basis of law, as well as its genesis and historical development.

2. LEGAL ETHICS.—The lectures in this course will be given by Paul Fuller, LL.D., Dean of the Law School, and will discuss some of the problems in legal ethics that confront the lawyer in actual practice.

It is believed that the courses of the school are so arranged as to unite a sound training in the fundamental principles of the law with a training in the practical application of these principles to actual legal work.

ACADEMIC YEAR.

The first half of the Academic Year, 1909-1910, will begin Thursday, September 23, 1909, and end January 31, 1910. The second half year will begin February 1, 1910, and end Tuesday, June 7, 1910.
